Over 260 years of expertise...

Royal Botanic Gardens Kew

The Royal Botanic Gardens Kew has a remarkable heritage, originally a nine-acre site on the banks of the River Thames, it was first laid out in 1759 by Princess Augusta, mother of King George III.

Over 260 years later the gardens today cover 326 acres, are home to 40 historically important buildings and house the largest living plant collection in the world, with over 40,000 species. On 3 July 2003 the gardens became a United Nations World Heritage Site.

Kew Gardens receives over 1.35 million visitors a year from around the world and has a strong and growing membership of over 80,000 supporters worldwide.

Rich in history, Kew Gardens is also an internationally respected centre of plant science, conservation and academic excellence with the largest and most diverse botanical collections under its care. Kew's Millennium Seed Bank is the largest global plant conservation project in the world and will eventually hold the seeds of at least half of all known plants.

Kew's unique combination of extensive collections, databases, scientific expertise and global partnerships plays a leading role in facilitating access to fundamental plant and fungal information. The core purpose of Kew's science stems from a simple and often overlooked truth: all our lives depend on plants and fungi.
